

I think it would be foolish inhibit XM. If you take TV for example, the broadcast channels have to work a little harder to play ball, but more networks have emerged, none have vanished. I think they just dont want to share their piece of the pie with anyone, the government needs to let business do business.